TRUCKS COLLIDE, DRIVER HURT; CALL FIRE DEPT.

A Tinley Park Bakery truck driven by Adolph Schultz crashed into the rear of a farm truck belonging to Conrad Bettenhausen and driven by his hired man, Edward Green, Tuesday evening about six o'clock. The accident occurred on Oak Park avenue near the Bert Fulton place north of Tinley Park.

The impact was so terrific that the Bettenhausen truck was ditched and the cab torn off the truck.

Green was very badly cut on the face and throat by broken glass. He was given first aid treatment by Dr. R. H. Carmichael of Tinley Park, who had to take 22 stitches to close the wounds. Green was taken to the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island. At latest reports he was getting along as well as could be expected.

Schultz was held by the county police. He escaped injury. The bakery truck caught fire and the Tinley Park Fire Department was called out. The blaze seemed to have been extinguished, but after the fire men had returned to Tinley the blaze broke out again and the fire department was called out for the second time.

FASHION NOTE

Sock him on the kisser
Put him on the pan,
Roll him in the gutter—
He's a business man!

Pillory the sucker,
Poke him in the eye,
Jump upon his torso—
He's a business guy!

Has he built a business
To enormous heights?
Brand him as a cheater—
Never mind his rights!

Does he give employment?
Is the pay roll big?
Put the bum in irons!
Toss him in the brig!

Does he pay in taxes
What the law calls for?
Why, the dirty reptile
Should be paying more!

Blast him in the headlines,
Charge some crooked acts!
Let this be your slogan:
"Anything but facts!"

Has he made some money?
Get his scalp today!
Say, where does he think he's Living, anyway?

Challenges Atheism

Opponents and critics of Christian faith have yet to produce a single example in which the promises of the Scriptures have not been completely fulfilled. Dr. Walter A. Maier, of Concordia Seminary, asserted last Sunday in his coast-to-coast Lutheran Hour broadcast. Dr. Maier challenged atheists to produce any evidence in modern or ancient history supporting Biblical disbelief.

"We hear much of the failure of Christianity, but the truth of Christ can never fail. It is only when churches step out of their divinely imposed role, the ministry of comforting and strengthening men's souls, that their messages and methods, even the most high-powered, collapse. On the other hand, the churches that rigidly follow the revealed word of God, working particularly with the great masses of the disappearing middle classes and the exploited poor (who will be won for Communism if they are not brought to Christ), are the salt of the earth to preserve us from decay.

The deepest tragedy in modern church life, is the wide-spread, yet futile effort to help finish what Christ himself completed forever on the cross 19 centuries ago. Not until we understand that we need no new revelation supplement to the Bible or 20th century key to the Scriptures, but that God's plan for man's happiness found its crowning conclusion at the cross and the open grave, can there be any sustaining assurance for life and death.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Supporters of the New Deal, as well as its opponents, are watching a new experiment by President Roosevelt with more than passing interest. They are watching this experiment because of various circumstances, including obviously its political phases, for they realize that the President has stepped out into a hitherto untrod field, unplowed ground, in this new experiment.

Chiefly because it is something entirely new and not because any one yet can tell what is going to happen, I want to report this week on the President's plan to have his eldest son, James, his No. 1 secretary, serve as a clearing house between the Chief Executive and some eighteen or more government agencies. Roosevelt, the younger, has been designated by the President to sit down once each week with heads of each of the enumerated agencies and talk over their problems, iron out those which he can help solve, co-ordinate the work between them as far as he is able to do so, and, most important to the men with whom he deals, decide which questions confronting these units of government may be matters for the President's personal consideration.

It is a big order. But Jimmy, as he is known around here, is a big man, at least physically, because he stands something like six feet, one inch. He is twenty-nine years old.

The audiences at the White House with Jimmy have already started and the agency heads who have sat through the conferences seem well pleased. At least, there has been no criticism yet, no signs of jealousy or indications of dissent among those who are called upon to take up their problems with the young secretary to the President. In fact, I have heard in only a few places a revival of the punning that went out a couple of years ago when the "Roosevelt for King" game was in its heyday, and Jimmy was laughingly labeled as the crown prince. Thus, the plan surely seems to have started off most auspiciously. But as I said, what success, what trials and tribulations, await it, no one can say.

Undoubtedly, President Roosevelt has started a plan of action that has much to be said in its favor. It has, of course, many possibilities of trouble, and there surely is argument against having the White House secretariat determine policy when the President has been elected to that job. Yet, at this time, credit must be argued along with signs and portents of trouble.

First, let us recognize that the office of President of the United States is a man-killing job. There is nothing like it anywhere else in the world. There are not too many men who can stand up under the load of work and worry that is continually on the shoulders of the head of the nation. There is no way possible for him to escape it. Vacations? Sleep? Absence from Washington? Not a chance. The work and worry is with him always, every minute out of his twenty-four hour day.

Thus, if there is any way that can be devised to lift some of the burden, it ought to be done. No way has been found heretofore, however, and the millstone continues around the President's neck.

On the other hand, this is a democracy. In the opinion of many persons, there already is too much power lodged in the hands of individuals who were not elected, but were appointed, to office. The President has vast power and he has to unload it somewhere into the hands of those he appoints. Nevertheless, throughout the federal government scores of men and women exercise very great authority over your life and mine who were personally selected by the President—for whom none of us voted when we voted for a presidential nominee. Result: red tape, rules and regulations, do's and don'ts galore, until we hardly know whether we can eat our food without transgressing or failing to comply with some federal regulation.

All of that is by way of saying that by implementing the relationship between the President and men and women whom he has appointed to office through the insertion of an added wheel of authority, there lie potential changes in all of these governmental policies. And there lies the possibility of changes being made, for better or for worse, without the President having knowledge of them.

What of the personal side—the feelings of the officials who have to deal with a young man who can speak, to some extent at least, for his father, the President? As I said earlier, thus far none of the conferences have given any indication of disturbed feelings. They may never have any thoughts along this line. Yet, I venture this observation: If they don't resent having the President's son tell them what to do, or not to do, at some time or other, the officials concerned will be unlike most other human beings.

The Department of Agriculture is quite pessimistic about the business outlook for next year. In a series of reports, analyzing general conditions, which the department issued the other day, it made no effort to conceal its belief that there is something wrong in the business situation far beyond the recent violent decline in the quotations of the stock markets.

These reports and conclusions take on considerably more weight when it is recalled that several other agencies of the government, notably Secretary Roper of the Department of Commerce, have sought vainly to make it appear that business is "good." At the same time, I think attention ought to be drawn to the fact that Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture is striving to have congress pass legislation to aid the farmer. It is just possible that he thinks his objectives can be achieved more easily if the congressmen are made to believe that general business and agriculture are taking a real tailspin. That is the politics of the situation, but business reports spread on the pages of newspapers seem to show that a bad slump lies ahead.

Recently, I wrote in these columns how business was as spotted as a leopard; that some firms were making more money than ever before, and how some others were getting by only because the volume was large and faced difficulties if the volume declined. The Agriculture department statements, based now on facts and figures, show even a worse picture than I described several months ago. They indicate strongly that 1938 is to be considerably lower in the level of business than 1937, and that spells trouble.

For example, the agriculture statement predicts that there will be "a less favorable demand for farm products" in 1938 than in 1937. Home domestic demands are down and appear likely to stay down, and the export market holds no hope for an increase. Emphasizing the dependence of consumption demand upon general business conditions, the department statement explained there was no certainty as to the length of time the present slump will continue. It added that "prospects are against a sufficiently early and vigorous rise in 1938 to bring the average of industrial activity and of consumer incomes up to that of 1937."

But from the standpoint of the farmer, the picture is made worse by the department statement. It points out how there has been a rise in production costs of crops and livestock and how, staring the farmer in the face, are more of these increases, adding:

"Along with the higher wage rates, farmers apparently will have to pay somewhat higher prices for farm machinery, automobiles, building materials, equipment and supplies. On the other hand, the prices of feed and seed will be substantially lower next spring than a year earlier."

The department did not go into detail in explaining these increases in production costs and increases in prices for things the farmer buys. It should have given facts and figures on these for they are basic and the picture is incomplete without them. Everyone knows, of course, that farm labor wants more money for its work and has been getting more in the last two or three years. Department of Labor statistics show this, and they show as well how much additional labor is receiving in its pay checks from industry. The automobile industry which has been organized by John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. labor group has been forced to pay much higher wages and naturally those wages have been added into the cost of the automobile which any one buys.

The automobile industry was only an illustration. The same is true all along the line.

The truth of the matter is that federal taxes which have been conceived by the President's brain trust professors and applied without stint or limit to industry are upsetting the whole agricultural as well as the whole business structure of the country. The load of taxes, together with a lot of queer-looking and cockeyed regulations, have continually increased the cost of production of everything from black-eyed peas to locomotives.

Lesson for November 21

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

LESSON TEXT—I Corinthians 3:10-15; Galatians 6:10.
GOLDEN TEXT—And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.—Galatians 6:9.
PRIMARY TOPIC—In Our Church.
JUNIOR TOPIC—What Can I Do to Help?
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Can I Do for Christ and the Church?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Need for Christian Workers.

"Laborers together with God"—such is the glorious and distinctive title of true Christians, according to the verse just preceding our assigned text. Unfortunately is the all too common error of regarding only pastors and missionaries as the workers in God's vineyard. While we recognize that there is a special calling for some men to leave their vocations and devote their entire time to the Lord's work, let us be sure properly to stress the importance of every Christian's being a worker for God.

The portions assigned for our study present the privilege and responsibility of Christians as fellow-workers with Christ, under the figures of builders and of seed sowers.

I. Builders of the House (I Cor. 3:10-15).

The first requisite of a building is a foundation and it must be strong and true. Builders for Christ have a sure foundation stone in Him.

1. The Foundation—Jesus Christ.

There is only definite assurance in Paul's word concerning the foundation. It is perfectly clear to him that there can be no Christian faith without Jesus Christ. Such a statement sounds almost childish. One might well assume that no intelligent person would claim to be one of God's builders, and reject his foundation stone. But, alas, many are they who claim to be Christians, who profess to be raising a structure of Christian life and testimony, but who have set aside the only possible foundation on which to build.

2. The Master Builder—and his builders.

Paul was a pioneer. He declares his ambition and calling to be "to preach the gospel not where Christ was named, lest I should build on another man's foundation" (Rom. 10:25). Such a privilege does not come to all men, but let those who thus serve learn of this "wise master builder" that they may lay only one foundation—Jesus Christ.

"Let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon." It is a serious matter to serve the Lord as a builder, for it is possible to go badly astray at this point as well as in laying the foundation.

3. The materials—good and bad.

Whether we apply Paul's words to the building of our personal spiritual life or to the work we do in the church they are equally serious and urgent. "The day"—when Christ returns, and we shall stand before him to give account of the deeds done in the flesh—will reveal by flaming fire whether we have been faithful, true and diligent in preaching God's Word, in prayer, in sacrificial service for Christ, or have sought to introduce into our lives and into the churches we serve the "wood, hay, and stubble" of unspiritual schemes, neglect of God's Word, prayerlessness.

Saved? Yes, but entering into God's presence as a man who has escaped from his burning house with nothing but his life.

II. Sowers of the Seed (Gal. 6:6-10).

The figure changes. No longer are we builders—but rather sowers of seed. Would that it were all good seed that were sown—but we see the sowing to the flesh as well as to the Spirit. This is true.

1. In our own lives. The inexorable law of sowing and reaping prevails in the moral realm as truly as it does in the physical. Men who would never expect wheat to grow where they have planted thistles, seem to expect that they may sow in their own lives the seeds of selfish indulgence, of careless neglect of the things of God, and still somehow reap the fruit of good character and noble living.

2. In the lives of others. We may be tempted to take attractive by-paths and short-cuts to win the interest and allegiance of men to ourselves and the church, but they will prove to bring but corruption and destruction. Spiritual seed will always produce spiritual life.

3. Waiting for the harvest. Harvest must be patiently awaited. We know it to be so in natural things; the same is true in the spiritual realm.

A Message of Love

One of the last slowly murmured sayings of the American poet Whit-tier, as he lay a-dying, was this: "Give—my love—to—the-world."

The Newest in Miniature

Sew-Your-Own always has had a soft spot in its heart for the Lady of the Fireside, she who cooks and bakes and sews and keeps everything right. Of course, it's easy to run-up and practically no trouble at all to launder. Better make two!

Push Gobbler as National Bird

Los Angeles, Calif.—The American eagle will have to give up his job to the turkey gobbler, if the Northwestern Turkey Growers association gets its way. Senators and congressmen of 14 states were asked to make the turkey the national bird at the next session of congress. It was argued that the turkey, besides being the symbol of Thanksgiving, is native to America. Misses Edith Lawrence (left) and Pat Gergen are pictured above showing how the turkey would look in the eagle's place against the American shield.

Ye Council Eats Right Well After Ye Slick Barter

Deer Is Thanksgiving Meal and Indian Is Goat.

IF AMERICANS this Thanksgiving are well able to appease both their consciences and their appetites, their moral dexterity is no better than that of their forebears on the town council at Danvers, Mass., in the year 1714. Venison, rather than turkey, made up the piece de resistance on a Thanksgiving feast there, but religious complications arose, as recorded by Rev. Lawrence Conant, of that city:

"After ye blessing was craved by Mr. Garrich of Wrentham, word came that ye buck was shot on ye

Mr. Shepard's conscience was tender, and so was poor Pequot's back.

Lord's day by Pequot, an Indian, who came to Mr. Epes with a lye in his mouth like Ananias of old.

"Ye council therefore refused to eat ye venison, but it was afterward decided that Pequot should receive forty stripes save one, for lying and profaning ye Lord's day, restore Mr. Epes ye cost of ye deer, and considering this a just and rightful sentence on ye heathen, and that a blessing had been craved on ye meat, ye council all partook of it but Mr. Shepard, whose conscience was tender on ye point of ye venison."

In nearby Boston a few years later the arrival of autumn with its storing of the winter supply of salt pork brought mingled thanksgiving and chagrin to a boy named Benjamin Franklin, who often became restless during the long graces which accompanied Massachusetts meals. So one day after the pork had been dutifully stored away, he suggested that if his father would only "say grace over the whole cask, once for all, it would be a vast saving of time."

Bear meat is no longer generally available for the Thanksgiving dinner.

In the latter half of the same century, whenever a feast was in order in the back country of Virginia and the Carolinas, young Daniel Boone or some other hunter would go out to find venison or bear meat to mix with pork in the habitual "great stew" of such a celebration. With it were served roast pork or bear or broiled venison.

Bear and venison are no longer generally available for the Thanksgiving dinner, but turkey is still one of the mainstays.

Extra! Noah's Ark Found!

BACK in the days of the Klondike gold rush, the few publishers in Alaska, especially those who issued dailies, had great difficulty in getting enough news to fill their papers. At one time the telegraph lines into Dawson were down for two months and the roads were so filled with snow that no mail arrived by dog team for 35 days.

During this period one Dawson publisher called his reporter to him. "Look here, we've simply got to have more news," he said. "Subscriptions are falling off and if you want to stay on my payroll, you'd better get out and grab off a story that will be talked about from the Aurora Borealis to the Southern Cross."

Casey Antonio Moran was the reporter's name and the imagination which he displayed in adding "Antonio" to his name because he "liked the sound of it" extended to his reportorial ability. So the next morning a headline clear across the front page of his boss' paper proclaimed, "Ruins of Noah's Ark Found on Mt. Koyukuk in Yukon Country."

Under that headline was an "exclusive interview" with an Indian chief who told of having been lost in the "Haunted Country" of the Koyukuk and finding on top of a mountain "a house as big as a white man's town built in a big canoe" which had turned to stone. When the reporter took him to a minister's home and showed him a picture of Noah's Ark, the chief declared that it was exactly like the house in the big canoe on the mountain top.

The story caused a sensation when the paper was distributed in Dawson. Although the other two dailies tried to discredit the yarn, many people were enough impressed by the affidavit, furnished by the chief, which was given a prominent place on the front page, to believe it. It was also believed by many people back in the "States" when press association wires carried it to newspapers who printed it and to this day one can hear an occasional reference to the fact that "they discovered Noah's Ark up in Alaska several years ago."

The Camelce

AMONG the correspondents who accompanied the Newton-Jenny exploring expedition in the Black Hills of South Dakota in 1875 was R. B. Davenport of the New York Herald. Davenport was a typical "tenderfoot" and a tireless seeker after information—which some of the packers and guides for the expedition were only too willing to supply!

One day he discovered the skeleton of a huge bull elk and excitedly asked California Joe, the famous scout, what it was. "Well, sir," replied Joe, "I reckon that there must be the bones of one of them camelces I've heerd so much about. You see, a good many year ago the gov'ment decided to use camels for packin' supplies down in the deserts of Arizona. Some of the females escaped and, feelin' sorta lonely, they joined up with a elk herd. It wasn't long before they was matrin' with the bull elks and the result was somethin' that was half-camel and half-elk. Dog-gonedest animal I ever seed—well, come to think of it, I never did see one myself but a lot uv fellows I knowed did."

So California Joe went on at great length, giving a minute description of the camelce, as he called it, and within a short time the New York Herald printed an extended account of this new marvel in the animal world which had been discovered out in the Black Hills!

Lirpa Loof

BACK in 1910, a story in the London (Ohio) Times announced that a coffee operator from Brazil, named Senor Lirpa Loof, was a visitor in that city. Moreover it printed a long interview with the distinguished foreigner on the subject of coffee cultivation.

Within a few days rival papers were printing even longer interviews on that subject and one of them told of a company that was being organized by the Brazilian with many local merchants as stockholders. One paper even borrowed a cut, used originally in the Times, to illustrate its story.

While public interest in this subject was at its height, the editor of the Times, H. F. Harrington, later director of the Medill school of journalism at Northwestern university, published a story which caused some of his rival editors considerable embarrassment. He suggested that they reverse the spelling of the name of the distinguished Brazilian. When they—and the public—did so, there it was: "April Fool!"

The London editor had been annoyed by the practice of "news piracy" by his rivals and he took this method of teaching them a much-needed lesson in newspaper ethics.

GROUND GRIP TIRES

WIN First Honors AT TROY • BIG ROCK LILY LAKE • WHEATLAND PLOWING CONTESTS

Using Firestone Ground Grip Tires, Paul Stiefboldt made the highest score for any one meet, with 92½ points out of 100. He also had the largest number of points for the four contests, 356½ out of a possible 400.

Carl Shoger had the highest average score per contest with 90 out of 100 possible points, using Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

Clarence Shoger won first place in the Young Men's Class in each of the four contests on Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

FIRESTONE Ground Grip Tires won sweeping victories this year in the plowing contests at Troy, Lily Lake, Big Rock and Wheatland, Illinois. In the plowing contests, as on the farms, more tractors were equipped with Firestone Ground Grip Tires than all other makes of tires combined. And these all-purpose tractor tires scored 3500½ points out of a possible total of 4100 for the four contests.

Why do plowing champions choose Firestone Ground Grip Tires? The answer is:

GREATER TRACTION—Takes a deeper, broader bite into the soil. Has positive self-cleaning action.

GREATER STRENGTH—Resists the strain of heavy pulling because every fiber of every cord is saturated with liquid rubber by the patented Firestone Gum-Dipping process. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and cord body so solidly together that we guarantee they will not separate.

GREATER SAVINGS—Saves 25% in time and up to 50% in fuel over steel-lugged wheels.

GREATER DRAWBAR PULL enables this tire to do more work in a given time.

Specify Firestone Ground Grip Tires when buying a new tractor or any wheeled farm implement. And, for your present equipment, ask your nearest Firestone Implement Dealer, Tire Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply & Service Store about the economical Firestone Cut-Down Wheel Program.

A Thanksgiving Prayer

For what we have, though small it be,
We thank thee, Lord.
For the simple joys of serenity,
We thank thee, Lord.
For the gentle touch of the friendly hand
Of those who love and understand,
We thank thee, Lord.

Of all thy gifts the greatest three
Are friendship, love and fidelity.
Let others pray for the harvest's yields,
For the golden grains of the fruitful fields,
Humbly our prayer to thee we send
That when we've reached our journey's end,
Someone may say, "Farewell, good friend."

Christmas Tree

Growing Christmas trees for a short rotation crop is one possibility for Illinois farmers to increase their income from idle land, reports J. E.
Davis extension forester College of Agriculture, University of Illinois and Illinois State Natural History Survey.

Demand for Christmas trees in the state is such that they are shipped from as far as the west coast, while thousands of acres of Illinois land lie idle and subject to soil erosion, he said.

As evidence that Christmas trees
can be grown with profit in Illinois, Davis pointed to a plantation in Livingston county planted in 1932 with 1200 trees to the acre and sold at the rate of 40 cents a tree in the winter 1936-37. About 1000 trees an acre survived making the plantation worth $400 an acre. Costs were about $50 an acre leaving a net earning of $70 an acre a year.

Although financial considerations are naturally important in a tree planting enterprise where an investment is concerned in land and land improvements, landowners are cautioned to look not only to the dollar to be earned, but to consider other benefits as well, Davis said.

For better land use and for soil erosion control, trees should be planted on the more than three million acres of land on Illinois farms which can not profitably be used for annual farm crops at present.

Much of this land now worthless for growing agricultural crops was one time good farming land, but has been ruined by erosion. Trees planted on such land will save it from erosion. On poorer soils trees will thrive because they have less exacting demands for food and moisture than have annual farm crops.

To assist Illinois farmers in solving their tree planting problems,
Davis has prepared a new circular
No. 477, "Forest Planting on Illinois Farms," which has just been issued by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Copies may be obtained by writing the college at Urbana.

Everybody InvitedRelative Feeding
Values of Hybrid
Corn Is Stressed

With the recent introduction and extended use of hybrid corn much question and speculation has arisen regarding its adaptation to the uses of corn and particularly its relative food value in animal feeding.

There may be some reason for this questioned feeding value from the fact that in this region the first and earliest trials of hybrid corn were with hybrid strains adapted to a longer growing season because most of the initial hybrid work was done in the center of the Corn Belt about one hundred miles south of our region and naturally the strains of hybrid requiring a longer growing season would fail to mature in our region. Immature soft corn would result. No one doubts the lower feeding value of immature corn.

Today, however, when we discuss merits of hybrid corn, unless otherwise stated, we mean hybrid grown from strains particularly adapted to our soil conditions and climatic region. We make sure of this by inspecting the seed fields where grown and personally check its maturing as well as other desirable qualities, as the farmers of this region did last summer by visiting the Thomson Hybrid Seed Corn Fields along Lincoln Highway in Frankfort Township. In this discussion, therefore, we will mean only the best adapted hybrid corn in our region.

There are further reasons for raising of questions of feeding values of hybrid. Few of us take kindly to any change in practice or method that causes us to change our ways, methods or equipment used in doing things. We are creatures of habit. Human progress has always had to overcome the pride and prejudice of former opinion as well as the inertia of change. When we are faced with making a change we are most prone to think of the reasons to the contrary and in giving expression to these not only start rumor but set in motion in the neighborhood statements that finally amount to pure fabrications. Yet such statements are picked up and eagerly passed on. This, however, is not without some benefit because it forces the newer practices and ways to prove their merit and also most quickly separates the false from the true.

The better adapted strains of hybrid corn have the capacity not only to procure more nitrogen from the soil to make proteins, more carbon from the air to make the carbohydrates but to synthesize these substances more efficiently as well as to completely mature these into stable forms in the corn kernel. We characterize such kernels as "sound corn" and which is the standard of merit or value by which the corn is evaluated at market centers. This stable sound corn will store without deterioration or loss (under, of course, suitable storage conditions) provided further that moisture content is down to safe storage level.

All of us have likely given thought to the grading of corn by our Federal and State Agricultural Departments and the standards of which are practically the standards of the Board of Trade at Chicago. It has been the experience of many farmers that the market grade differences so determined about represent the differences in feeding value of the corn for beef feeding. In the dairy region, however, as well as where corn is used for our own home feeding, relative differences are greater because freight and marketing costs do not enter into the equation.

When the dairy man buys feed the content uppermost in his mind is protein, which is the nitrogenous portion of the feed, carbo-hydrates being next, which include the starches, sugars, fats and fiber. Protein however, is the important constituent of value.

In the growing of plants we know that protein (nitrogen) comes from the soil, whereas the carbon of the carbo-hydrates is taken from the air through the stomata on the underside of the leaves. Where then, we have a deeper and more extensively rooted plant we can expect to have (up to the available nitrogen in the soil) the higher protein accumulation and this is where there are differences too, in the different strains of hybrids. In the hybrids springing from the 5 x 8 Piaster single cross as shown by the Thomson Hybrid 366 the packing of protein and starch portions in the kernel are closer as evidenced by the bright translucency of the kernel and distinguished from the flourey or dull white of the higher starch and air cells of immature kernels. This packing is also shown by the more rounded, stretched pericarp (outer hull of the corn kernel). All of this means less air cells and more substance within the kernel — higher bushel weight — higher feeding value.

Some farmers who have been raising low grades of open pollinated corn and have never fed anything different from a starchy, air celled, low feeding value kernel state that animals can't chew and masticate the hybrid kernel as well. This is not true of the younger animals but is likely quite true of the twelve-year old cow or superannuated horse. The progressive farmer, however, knows that farm efficiency is to be found only in feeding and handling the young animal. The same is true in growing the higher producing varieties and strains of grain.
One might find on the same farm the inefficiency of old animals with low producing strains of open pollinated corn. We all appreciate where animals are on grass or green feed the teeth are tender and mastication deficient. Under such conditions the efficiency of feeding is increased with grinding and distichnation to grind is not an acceptable excuse for feeding low food value
corn.

Another thought is that as market price increases the economic benefit through grinding increases. Occasionally we have animals of age that are efficient producers and their high efficiency should also warrant preparing their feed in the most efficient manner. What the dairy and cattle feeding farmer is interested in is most milk and most beef gains per acre. With corn they get that through highest protein production to the acre and produced by the few outstanding strains of hybrid corn and much above the acre production of ordinary open pollinated or inferior hybrids.

CHICAGO SHOW DRAWS
NATION'S BEST STOCK

On hundreds of farms in the United States and Canada thousands of the continent's finest farm animals are now in the final week of grooming for the competitions of the 38th

International Live Stock Exposition which opens here November 27 and will be in progress until Dec. 4.

Despite high feed costs during the past year, entries will equal if not surpass last year's record breaking show at which over 14,000 animals were exhibited, the management reports.

The 1937 exposition will feature competitions for six breeds of purebred cattle, eleven breeds of draft horses. According to the show's secretary-manager, B. H. Heide, a tabulation of the entries reveals increases over last year in 12 breeds.

Farmers in 25 states and Canada, from Calodinas to British Columbia, and from Maryland to New Mexico, will exhibit this year at the International Grain and Hay Show world's largest farm crops competition, which will be held this year for the 19th time in connection with the live stock exposition.

The 46 judges who will make the awards this year in the livestock contests are coming from 15 states, the District of Columbia, Canada, and England.

All of the individual steer classes will be judged by Alexander Ritchie, manager of the Royal Farms at Windsor, England, who is now en route to the United States. He is making the trip by special permission from King George, proprietor of the Royal Farms.

Mr. Ritchie will judge the junior feeding contest beees, which will be shown by farm boys and girls from ten states, on the opening day of the exposition, Nov. 27, and will tie the ribbons in the open classes on the following Monday and Tuesday, concluding his task with the selection of the grand champion steer of the show on November 30.

Resting the Lung by Injecting Air

This patient is receiving pneumothorax treatment for tuberculosis, a painless method used widely in this country since 1912. Pneumo means air and thorax refers to the chest, and the procedure is to inject a gas into the space between the chest wall and outer surface of the lung. By this process the infected lung is put to rest, thereby restricting respiration to the healthy lung. When tuberculosis is discovered in its early stages pneumothorax treatment can save thousands of lives. Many men and women today are back at work, healthy and useful, because they can go to their doctors periodically and receive "refills" of air. Pneumothorax is one of the modern weapons advocated by the National Tuberculosis Association and its 2,000 affiliated state and local associations. Their educational campaign is financed by Christmas Seals sold between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

As Congress Meets

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

As Congress meets in its current special session, the American people look hopefully to Capitol Hill for relief from the many problems which have troubled them through recent months.

For from Washington and elsewhere have come many signs more or less optimistic in nature.

They indicate:

That members of Congress, fresh from human contacts with the men and women back home, will be guided by the wishes of those constituents, rather than by the demands of officeholders and politically-appointed bureau chiefs.

That Congress will again assert a sense of its responsibility under the government of balanced powers established by our Constitution.

That Congress will remember that taxes are paid out of the earnings of the men and women who labor, and that every dollar flung recklessly into new and odd experiments is a dollar out of a wage-earner's envelope or a housewife's budget.

That Congress will realize that the solution of unemployment lies not in jungles of diagrams and figures, but in encouraging the enterprise which creates employment—and with it national progress.

That Congress will insist that ours is a government of and for all the people, and not for groups and classes favored on the basis of how many votes they represent.

This, say commentators from Washington, represents the spirit of many Congressmen after their healthful contacts with the folks at home.

America will hope it is an accurate picture. And Congressmen should hope so, too. For on the judgment of those folks at home, depends ultimately not only re-election to Congress, but the progress of our nation as well.

Politicians may talk and threaten, but it is the people who make the decisions and cast the votes.

This is something for Washington to remember—as Congress meets.

PALOS PARK

Hi Folks:

Another week of peeping into diaries and getting all the low down on your private affairs. I think its just too, too shocking but here it is. Remember the only person who likes to be interrupted in the middle of a sentence is a convict, but then some people never learn.

Fred Haack and Chas. Moon were seen on a street corner playing ball with their books. Swell school spirit, don't you think?

What would happen if, Alice Crawford broke her favorite finger nail. Or if Lucille Willis didn't laugh out of turn?

Gene Ahlgrim bet a fair young lady that she couldn't eat 15 hamburgers all at once. P. S. She lost.

Art Koterba, Palos grocer was asked why he didn't give his dried beef a drink of water and why he didn't take Prince Albert out of the can. I am sorry, but I forgot to see whether he blushed, laughed or looked disgusted. Most likely disgusted.

I bet you didn't know that Marge Juneman's one ambition was to become a pianist.

thusiasts were out. Lets have a larger crowd of rooters next time.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Mortals and Immortals" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 14.

The Golden Text was, "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father. Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ" (Galatians 4:6, 7).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "As for man, his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. For the wind passeth over it and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more. But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children; To such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them" (Psalms 103:15-18).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mortal man is the antipode of immortal man in origin, in existence, and in his relation to God" (215:24).

Daily Schedule for Best, Most Economical Heat in Furnace Operation

I FEEL certain you'll find the following daily schedule for taking care of your furnace fire will simplify its operation and give you the utmost fuel satisfaction:

MORNING—To get quick heat, open the Ashpit Damper wide and close the Check Damper. Add fresh fuel only when fire is burning briskly, leaving an exposed spot of live coals directly in front of the firedoor. If you find it necessary, gently shake the grates, if they weren't shaken the night before.

DURING DAY—Control fire with Check and Ashpit Dampers. Don't use Turn Damper to regulate fire daily. Keep it closed as nearly as possible without hampering the free burning of the fire.

NIGHT—Shake grates gently until the first red glow shows in ashpit before banking fire. This done, wet ashes down and clean ashpit. Always open the Check Damper and close the Ashpit Damper when banking fire. Keep them that way until gases burn from fresh fuel. Then close them. Never leave the firedoor open after fire is banked.

Follow this daily schedule and you'll get the best results.

Often "acid indigestion" is distressing to you—and offensive to others. But now there is no excuse for being guilty.

You simply carry your alkalizer with you—and use it at the first sign of "upset" stomach. Simply take two tiny tablets of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia when out with others. Or—if at home—you can take two teaspoons of liquid Phillips'. Both act the same way.

Relief is usually a matter of seconds. "Gas," nausea, "heartburn," acid breath—all respond quickly. Just make sure you ask for "Phillips'."

Obstacles Make Men

It cannot be too often repeated that it is not helps, but obstacles, not facilities, but difficulties that make men.—W. Matthews.

"2-Drop" Treatment Brings Head Cold Relief

Just put 2 drops of Penetro Nose Drops in each nostril and breathe. Every breath you take brings you more relief from the discomfort of miserable head colds and sinus congestion. Penetro Nose Drops bring comforting relief because they help to shrink swollen membranes, soothe the inflamed area, make breathing easier. 25c, 50c, $1 bottles at druggists. Purse size, 10c. Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

CHAPTER I

Joyce sat on a leather puff beside her small-paned window looking out and down at the turning maple leaves. She was nineteen—tomorrow she would be twenty. Nobody living knew it but herself—nobody. She had lied about her true birthday since she was eight and owing to a single overwhelming catastrophe it had been easy enough to confuse her father. Twelve years—twelve years in Elsinboro, six of them without him, terribly alone with her stepmother. Yes, you could be alone with somebody else—far lonelier than if you were by yourself. She was alive—tremendously alive inside. That was the trouble; it had to stay inside. She palpitated with dreams of what might be—the secret dreams of a young girl who longs to believe in life as something warm, something you can hold in your arms. But when she looked outside herself she stared at a wall.

Elsinboro has its counterpart in Olean or Elmira but not in Wilkes-Barre, Scranton or Pottsville. Forty thousand strong, it has known no overpowering foreign infiltration and presents a cross-section of the American scene, old style, from a miniature Tammany to an elite who read French, talk liberalism and discriminate between one dollar and another. There are plenty of dollars, gathered by adventurous sons from the four corners of the earth, but there were no fabulous fortunes until Bolivar Smith got an idea 15 years ago. Six roughnecks believed in it and became multi-millionaires almost overnight. They took over the section now known as Platinum Hill and built their incongruous chateaux in a huge circle.

But Joyce Sewell was not of them; in fact she had no part or parcel of Elsinboro, new or old. She was pure North Shore, descended from generations of the Sewells who christened more clipper ships when the American merchant marine overtopped the fleets of the world than any other tribe. Her presence in the town was an accident—one of those tragic accidents that leave their mark for the whole of life. The scene—so far away, so long ago—lived in her eyes, shut or open. She would listen too, her ears trembling lest they hear. But memory is silent, part of its terror lies in silence.

No crash of guns reached her now, only the remembered flash. No thud of bullets on stone, wood and flesh, no choking scream—only the indelible, the unforgettable scene. Her mother unspokeably murdered. A pause—the eternal pause that had lasted but a second. Her father snatching her up under one arm, a petaca under the other, to rush along interminable corridors, followed by shots and the derisive jeers of the marauders who believed he could not possibly escape. Stairs—wooden stairs, stone steps, the secret door and the garden, black beneath towering cypress and spreading ash. Hurry! Hurry! The postern, unlocked, then locked. The starlit open night, immersion in the icy lake, a dugout and finally refuge in a humble peon hut. No—not finally. Followed days in a panner on the back of a mule, hours in a crowded train, a week on a refugee ship bound for New Orleans and on that ship Mrs. Irma Thorne, of Elsinboro, New York.

Irma Thorne, then three years a widow, believed it was her mission to do people good whether they liked it or not. She was not a refugee but a returning traveler with a well-filled pocketbook. She had soft to bacco-colored eyes, but there the softness ended; though the truth would have surprised and wounded her, her chin, her stocky body, her will and her conscience were as tough as rawhide. The mere sight of Cutler Sewell's lackluster eyes, gone dead in his head, staring at his little daughter but eternally seeing something else, was a supreme challenge to her peculiar aptitude for service and abnegation. She took charge. She gave Joyce her first bath in ten days and made her a frock out of her own best skirt. She rushed father and daughter to her home in Elsinboro. She was undoubtedly a good woman and by every rule in the copybook Joyce should have loved her. Gently admonished by her father she tried pitifully to do so and failed. It was no use. She was too young to think things out; all she knew was that a barrier of ice stood between her heart and her benefactress.

"Daddy, let's go away."
"We can't, Joyce; not just now. At present I haven't a cent."
"Please, papacito. I don't like her."

"You mustn't say that. She's a good woman—a very good woman."
"I know," quavered Joyce, bewildered by her own detestation but face to face with a fact. "Oh, please, papacito, please!"

He compromised, yielding to the endearing pet diminutive that had never yet failed her. On the excuse she ought to keep up her Spanish as a possible asset for the future he took her into his study for an hour every afternoon. That hour had been sacred, proof against any form of interruption from the day when a knock on the door had thrown Joyce into a paroxysm of screams followed by prolonged sobbing. Yet she was no cry-baby; that one convulsive protest was her last, but it had been enough. She and her father talked Spanish in peace, not always for the full hour. Sometimes, quite content to be at his side, she watched him write letters—long painstaking letters—always to one of two addressees.

When the answers came he filed them away, ever more and more sadly, in the petaca. It was a funny little trunk covered with rawhide stretched on the frame while still wet. The hair was mostly worn off but there were still arabesques of brass-headed tacks to which he had added a card bearing the following signed inscription: "Upon my death this box and contents become the property of Joyce Sewell, my daughter and sole heir." With each addition to the dossier he weakened, became less the man of property and more the chastened sacrificial goat. The day came when Irma Thorne married what was left of him for appearances' sake and for his and for Joyce's—not for her own. Perhaps he knew the surrender would kill him, but at least his orphaned child would have a roof over her head. She was sixteen when he died.

Helm Blackadder was a rock of a man, forty-nine and virile, with bushy brows, steely eyes and crisp gray hair. He was a native son, a product of Elsinboro so interwoven in the town's pattern it had never occurred to him to consider any other place as a base. Yet in his capacity as an excellent engineer and a daring promoter he had burrowed in South Africa, combed Korea and lived in Chile with varying degrees of profit. In the intervals he had known Irma Bostwick, Irma Thorne and finally Irma Sewell. Part of him frankly admired part of her; she had a bulldog quality and so had he. Now she had sent for him and as he entered her very comfortable living room he wondered why.

"Well, Irma, what's on your mind?"

"It's Joyce, Helm; but do sit down. Take that big chair. It looks as if it had been made for you."

"What's the matter with Joyce?"

Mrs. Sewell frowned and then substituted a look of patient resignation. "You know all I've done for her. Don't think I mean I begrudge it since it was my duty and there's no greater satisfaction in life than seeing one's duty and doing it. But can you believe in spite of everything she actually dislikes me? She does, though; I think she always has." She waited, but since Blackadder refrained from comment she continued. "But that's not the worst of it; she's harming herself, deliberately destroying her great chance."

"How?" he asked bluntly.
"Oh, all this extra-curriculum studying she's been doing. She's kept up her Spanish so you'd think she could teach it anywhere but now she wants to take a business course."

"Secretarial?"
"No; she doesn't give it any fancy name—just plain stenography and typing."

"What's wrong with that?" demanded Blackadder. "It's the way several of the highest paid women in the world got their start and I can name half a dozen cases where it's been a royal road to marriage. So I don't see how it could hurt Joyce."

"You don't?" said Mrs. Sewell. She edged forward on her chair. "Listen, Helm; I wouldn't tell this to anybody but you. Howard Sempster, Emil Schaaf and Michael Kirkpatrick have all proposed to her over and over again."

"Half of Platinum Hill!" said Blackadder, scowling. "Well, she's no business woman and never will be."

"Why? Why do you say that?"
"Because if she were she'd marry them all, one after the other, and retire."

"Oh!" gasped Mrs. Sewell, truly shocked.

"Which one of the three do you think she'd find it easiest to fall for and to handle?"

"That's what I wanted to ask you. It's got to be one pretty soon or none."

"Why? What's the hurry?"
"Can't you think it out for yourself? If Platinum Hill goes after a girl with no money it's largely because she isn't a stenographer."

Blackadder's scowl deepened. "I hate to agree with you but I guess you're right. It's a shame one town should be saddled with three of that brand of snob, but if she's so attractive, what about a boy or two of the good old stock? Aren't any of them hanging around?"

"They would if they could afford it, but they know they can't. The nice boys she knows are all in college with years to go before they'll begin looking for a job. They're too young. I have enough income to manage on and wait, but I know Joyce—she won't stay with me much longer and she hasn't a penny."

First the marquis demanded that his body be embalmed. That was simple enough and the undertakers had done so before the will was unsealed.

Then the marquis demanded that a small house be constructed on the shore of the Mediterranean, placed on a high point, with the walls of glass facing toward the sea. The body should be placed in this room with a radio set and family portraits to keep him company.

"What about her father? I remember hearing he owned one of the show places in Mexico. Do you know what that means? A hacienda that doesn't run over 20,000 acres would be at the foot of the class."

"He lost it—everything he had. He wasn't even compensated for the murder of his wife though his lawyer assured him he would be. Cutler used to speak of it as blood money and wouldn't have thought of taking it except for Joyce. And it's she that matters now. She's got to be saved from herself and you must help."

"I? Why me?"
"Because you're real, Helm, and the only man I know well enough to turn to. There's something in her frightens me. Sometimes she's a burning bush and the next instant she's quicksilver. Please, Helm."

This child was put in my charge by a direct act of God. Whether she loves me or not it's my duty to guide her life along the lines of common sense. Which do you want her to do—go around looking for a job at $15 a week or be the first to bring a little culture to Platinum Hill? Which gives her the best chance for a full life?"

"A missionary, eh?" said Blackadder, his lips quivering oddly. He lifted his heavy shoulders and let them fall. "Well, Mike oughtn't to be so bad. I remember his father as a ditch-gang foreman with a laugh and plenty of punch besides."

Mrs. Sewell sighed resignedly. "I would have chosen Howard Sempster, but trust a man to pick a man is a good rule though we women seldom follow it. So it's to be Mrs. Michael—not Mike—Kirkpatrick. Anyway it sounds a lot better than Mrs. Schaaf." At that moment there was a sound of somebody entering the hall. "Joyce, is that you?"

"Yes, ma'am."
"She's never once called me mother," whispered Mrs. Sewell to Blackadder, a hurt and bewildered look in her liquid brown eyes. Then she raised her voice. "Come here, dear; we want to talk to you."

Blackadder disliked being rushed and felt he was being drafted without his consent, but immediately Joyce entered he was conscious of an odd reaction as though all his gears had gone suddenly into reverse. The girl was more than handsome. There was ardor in her bearing, her eyes and her half-parted lips that not only aroused his combative nature, but promptly convinced him that Irma was right—the sooner this potential dynamo was married off, the better for all concerned.

She nodded to him and turned to her stepmother. "Well?"
"Oh, do sit down, Joyce. Can't you sit down and talk reasonably for once in your life?"

French Nobleman's Will Provided Body Be Seated in Room to Face Angry Sea

The Marquis d'Urre d'Aubais was a curious man when alive, but when his will was read after his death the court was astounded. It was surprising enough for a marquis to leave $60,000 to the French postoffice, but the conditions accompanying this gift were a little too much for the court, writes a Paris United Press correspondent.

First the marquis demanded that his body be embalmed. That was simple enough and the undertakers had done so before the will was unsealed.

Then the marquis demanded that a small house be constructed on the shore of the Mediterranean, placed on a high point, with the walls of glass facing toward the sea. The body should be placed in this room with a radio set and family portraits to keep him company.

Authorities decided that the marquis must have liked the sea. They constructed the little house at the little port of Carro and equipped it with a special radio set which gives signals to passing ships to avoid the dangerous rocks that endangered the coast at this point.

The lifeboat at the Rogues de Carro was named after the marquis.

But the final request was too much for officials, for the marquis asked that his body be placed seated in the room from where it could look out on the angry sea. Perhaps the men who executed this will were suspicious and feared the baleful effects of the dead man's eyes.

Anyway, the marquis' body reclines now, with only a glass window in the coffin above his face. Seamen in the tiny port are thankful for the marquis' gift to them, but they feel better knowing he is asleep and not sitting watching them.

UNDER PRESSURE

By George Agnew Chamberlain
STARTS IN THIS ISSUE!

You'll enjoy the unique story of Joyce Sewell's escapade in romantic old Mexico. Follow her through unparalleled adventure as she copes with political intrigue to regain possession of LaBarranca, the secluded hacienda where she was born. Watch the developments that place her in the center of amusing international complications... and watch her fall in love with Dirk Van Suttart, the handsome undersecretary from the American embassy, assigned to guard this young upstart! Read today's installment of "Under Pressure"... and read the following chapters of George Agnew Chamberlain's gay new serial!

AROUND THE HOUSE

Storing Summer Garments.—All garments in the summer wardrobe should be cleaned before storing. Soil and stains allowed to remain in such garments when put away may cause permanent discoloration.

To Raise the Pile on Velvet.—Cover a hot iron with a wet cloth, and hold the velvet over it. Brush it quickly while damp.

To Roll Corn Flakes.—Lay a clean towel on the table and put the corn flakes in the center. Fold each side of the towel over the flakes, turn both ends over to the center and crush with a rolling pin.

Freshening Coconut.—Shredded coconut that becomes dry can be freshened by soaking it in milk for five minutes before using it in cookies, cakes, frostings and puddings.

To Prevent Rugs From Slipping.—Jar rubbers securely fastened by sewing on the under side will prevent throw or scatter rugs from slipping on smooth floors.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

In Our Need
Just to realize that there are friends in the world who care is a great help.—Sir Wilfred Grenfell.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife! Take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Firmness
It is only those who possess firmness who can possess true gentleness.—La Rochefoucauld.

MAGIC CARPET

It doesn't matter what you're thinking of buying—a bar-pin or a baby grand, a new suit for Junior or a set of dining-room furniture—the best place to start your shopping tour is in an easy-chair, with an open newspaper. The turn of a page will carry you as swiftly as the magic carpet of the Arabian Nights, from one end of the shopping district to the other. You can rely on modern advertising as a guide to good values, you can compare prices and styles, fabrics and finishes, just as though you were standing in a store. Make a habit of reading the advertisements in this paper every week. They can save you time, energy and money.

The Curse of Progress

He Needn't Worry

The conceited young man had been in hospital for some time, and had been extremely well looked after by the pretty nurse.

"Nurse," said the patient one morning, "I'm in love with you. I don't want to get well."

"Don't worry," replied the nurse cheerfully, "you won't. The doctor's in love with me too, and he saw you kissing me this morning."—Answers Magazine.

Poor Pickings.

A country school teacher came into the bank to cash her monthly salary check. The cashier apologized for giving her dirty bills, saying he had forgotten school teachers were afraid of germs.

"Oh, that's all right," she said a little sadly, "no germ could live on my salary."—The Laughter Library.
